

Integrated Safety Information System

Is your campus, office complex, or large installation prepared for the next emergency?

Call on the team that helped the Pentagon after 9/11: Cape Fox Professional Services (CFPS). In an emergency, your people immediate and targeted information. E-mail and cell phones are often unavailable. What is the answer? Protect your people now by having CFPS install an Integrated Safety Information System (ISIS).

Cape Fox is the fastest growing Defense Contractor in the United States, according to INC 5000.

ISIS puts large, specially configured, flat panel displays in key hallways, walkways, intersections, and entryways. During normal operation, the displays provide graphical information about local events, awards, achievements, and reminders. During and after an emergency, ISIS provides a means to control foot traffic to keep your people safe.

ISIS gives you everything you need to benefit from a highly functional digital signage network:

- Centralized management of content and alerts – even for multiple iterations – and proactive monitoring of all hardware and software components on the network.
- Automatic distribution of content and alerts to the displays using a streamlined delivery and confirmation process.
- Dynamic rendering of high quality and data-driven content for playback across multiple display sizes, shapes and resolutions – all without having to modify the content and alerts.

With the lessons learned from 9/11, CFPS is making ISIS available to states, localities, businesses, and non-profits worldwide. Come visit our Airport Plaza Operations Center near Washington, DC for a capabilities overview. Every sizable organizational facility needs the peace of mind that comes from having an advanced digital signage and emergency notification system that assists in emergency situations. Organizations looking to protect their people move up to the next level in facility safety by installing CFPS ISIS.
